B'MORE BIRDS

By KATHY BROHAWN

Public Art Takes Flight on York Road in Govans

Have you seen them? More bright bird murals are popping up along the York Road corridor in Govans. A 10-foot tall iron bird sculpture now graces the corner of Belvedere Avenue and York Road. The bird-themed public art is a homage to Baltimore as "Birdland," but also has a deeper meaning to this racially and economically diverse community. Thanks to a collaboration between York Road Partnership, Govanstowne Business Association, and Loyola University.

This public art project began with a 1 percent for Public Art Project, a collaboration between the Department of Transportation and the Baltimore Office of Promotion and the Arts. The first six B'more bird murals came to life on the York Road corridor between 42nd Street and Woodbourne Avenue in 2013. Artist landry Randriamandroso was selected for the project due to his innate understanding of the importance of the interconnection between environment and residents. He explains: "In ever-changing urban landscapes, [the birds] represent adaptation, resilience, and the continuation of life. When changes occur in a neighborhood, it changes the dynamic make-up of the population—new inhabitants come; some leave; some stay and adapt with the new changes. Eventually, they represent us and our neighbors." All the birds in the murals are native to Maryland and were identified in the three local forest patches in our area, the Govans Urban Forrest, Springfield Woods, and Wilson Park.

The same collaborators secured funding for the next round of bird-themed public art to take flight. The Baltimore City Anchor Initiative funded the six additional murals completed in October 2017 to be painted by landry Randriamandroso between Woodbourne Avenue to Northern Parkway. landry graduated from Maryland Institute College of Art in 2009 with an MA in community arts. He specializes in graphic and mixed media art-making that focuses on environmental and social subjects. His goal as an artist is to create art that is accessible and inclusive to everyone and has been involved in such community projects around the country.

The Department for Housing and Community Development funded the York Road Gateway Art Project through a Community Legacy grant. Two gateway sculptures are designed by the Baltimore-based artist team of Rachel Timmins, Tim Schofield, and Kyle Miller for the project. The team is well-known locally for their "Light City Peacock" which has traveled nationally and internationally. One gateway art sculpture is located at York Road and Belvedere Avenue, the second will be located on

LWCA Election Taking Place at January General Meeting

According to the LWCA by-laws, the election for the following calendar year's officers takes place at the final general meeting of the year. Due to low attendance and an incomplete slate of officers, the Nov. 2 election was postponed until the Jan. 25, 2018, general meeting. PLEASE attend the Jan. 25 meeting. Dues-paying members may also submit their paper ballots as described below.

President-nominee Jim Pickett puts it best, "What Lake Walker really needs now is 'new blood' in its leadership. Having served in a variety of capacities over the past 26 years, I am not 'new blood.' If elected, I will make every effort to recruit and educate new people into the joys and rewards of community service."

In 2018, all board members and committee chairpersons will focus on engaging residents to foster new leadership. New to LW and wondering what's involved in being a board member? Perhaps you've been here for years, but have an idea that you've always wondered if we could try? Let's talk! Contact a board member or committee chair (email addresses are listed in this newsletter and under the "LWCA" tab of www.lakewalker.org).

Successful Fall Cleanup

By JIM PICKETT

Due to a mysterious, and suspicious, herbicide application in our community garden, it was necessary to replace $300 worth of plants around the Lake Walker sign. They were purchased from Green Fields Nursery at a generous 20% discount. Also, numerous bags of trash and debris were collected by the following hard-working volunteers: Jim Bersani, Dean Calahan, Cy Governs, Barbara Joellenbeck, Tom Piccin, Jim Pickett, John Swivel, and Meg Zimmerman. A job well done. Stay tuned for an announcement of the spring cleanup. 📧
